

Antifungal Activity of Tetrahydroquinolines against Some Phytopathogenic Fungi

Margarita Gutiérrez^{a,*}, Unai Carmona^a, Gabriel Vallejos^b, and Luis Astudillo^a

^a Laboratory of Organic Synthesis, Institute of Chemistry of Natural Resources, University of Talca, Casilla 747, Talca, Chile. E-mail: mgutierrez@utalca.cl

^b Bioorganic Laboratory, Institute of Chemistry, Science Faculty,
Austral University of Chile, Valdivia, Casilla 567, Isla Teja S/N, Valdivia, Chile

* Author for correspondence and reprint requests

Z. Naturforsch. 67c, 551–556 (2012); received January 16/July 27, 2012

Seven synthetic tetrahydroquinolines with different substitution patterns were obtained by an imino Diels-Alder condensation reaction and were evaluated against phytopathogenic fungi. Compounds with a methoxy group showed interesting activity against Cladosporium cladosporoides with a MIC value of 13.75 µg/mL

Key words: Substituted Tetrahydroquinolines, Antifungal, Imino Diels-Alder Reaction